

Bustle Hires Emmy-Award Winning Erin Delmore as Senior Political Correspondent

New York, NY — May 24, 2017— Bustle, the largest independent website for millennial women, with an audience of 50 million unique readers a month — announced today the hiring of Erin Delmore as Senior Political Correspondent. Delmore will contribute on-the-ground and on-air reporting for the digital outlet during live events and breaking news situations, as well as special features and stories for news.

Delmore is an Emmy award-winning journalist with experience across local and national television, print and radio. She joins Bustle from PBS's "NJTV News with Mary Alice Williams," where her on-air reporting on New Jersey politics and state and local issues garnered three Emmy nominations. Prior to joining NJTV News, Delmore was a digital producer and reporter for MSNBC.com. She was a member of the 2015 National Emmy award-winning "All In With Chris Hayes" team. Delmore has covered numerous presidential elections and breaking news situations including the 2016 presidential election for NJTV News/PBS, the 2012 presidential election as a producer for MSNBC's "Hardball with Chris Matthews," and the August 2014 protests in Ferguson, Missouri, where she contributed live, on-air reports for MSNBC's "The Rachel Maddow Show."

"Bustle knows that women in their teens, twenties and thirties are as diverse as America itself. I can't wait to travel the country and tell their stories and make sure that their concerns and passions are represented in today's fast-moving media climate," Delmore said. "I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to break news, break down the headlines, and inspire a new generation of women to understand their power in Washington and beyond. As we head into the 2018 midterms, and eventually the 2020 presidential election, I want to help make Bustle the place where women across the political spectrum engage with our democracy as educated voters and active citizens."

"Erin Delmore is a force to be reckoned with," said Bustle's Executive Editor, News, Emily Anne Epstein. "She's made a career of smart, fearless journalism and I couldn't be more excited to have her join our team."
